When students returned to SHC in August many changes had taken place. For example the cafeteria was being redone, the parking lots in front of Mobile and O'leary Halls were being repaved, and Yenni Hall was being restored. Mellie Boagni and Wes Cable had taken over Student Activities Director and Dean of Students, respectively. Also, local greeks were again recognized by the administration. With all these changes students began seeing Spring Hill College in A DIFFERENT OUTLOOK.

Reggaefest, and visits from various comedians were only a few of the new events on campus. SGA became more involved in students' complaints. The Cloister was open all day for students. Marilyn Quayle came to visit SHC. Also, in March SGA sponsored a Hypnotist. Academically, the SPRINGHILLIAN put out a daily issue along with the larger weekly paper. Because students and faculty worked together to better SHC, the entire school was seen in A DIFFERENT OUTLOOK

Freshmen Orientation

Rain, unfinished construction, Portier Lane being only one-way, a mile hike to O'leary and Mobile Hall. Do these things sound familiar? They should because these were a few of the devastating conditions of this year's Freshman Orientation. But, because we overcame those setbacks with such flying colors, it makes this year's orientation one of the best ever. On Friday, August 21, 1992, new students began their first year at Spring Hill College with their first peer group meetings, welcome speeches by Father Rewak, Dr. Ken Hamilton and Mr. Wes Cable, a picnic on the South Lawn and finished this exhausting day at a new student mixer at the Badger's Den. Saturday took on a more serious note when students attended campus resource meetings, registered, received ID's, purchased books and took placement tests. The evening's activities included mass at St. Joseph's Chapel and the famous Late Night Show and Wild Video Party. Although the Late Night Show has always had a reputation for being very entertaining, this year's was one of the best ever. The show, put on by the orientation staff, was hosted by "David Letterman" and the skits included Cajunman, Pat, the Honest Classroom, and numerous original commercials. For the end of orientation on Sunday, the new students and orientation staff took a trip to Gulf shores for a day in the sun.

Overall, 1992 Orientation was informative, productive, and most importantly enjoyable. But, this success would not have been possible without a great orientation staff and the cooperation of the faculty and staff. Everyone, including the new students and their parents, pulled together to overcome the obstacles. "Without the organization and dedication of this year's staff, orientation would have never proved to be as beneficial to the freshman as it was," commented staffer, Jen Schlaeger. So, let's offer a special thanks to all those involved with 1992 Orientation. Monee Byers

Social Life

Every year social life at Spring Hill changes. This year many students chose to hang out in the dorms, venture to local bars, or just buy a couple kegs and have a party at "The Ranch." Reggae Fest started off the year when four bands played for Spring Hill on the tennis courts. CLub Mystic, One Drop Plus, Innasense, and Jugde Not performed while students mingled and met new people. Because this was the first campus sponsored event of the year freshman were able to get a feel of the atmosphere at SHC. The next event on campus was the PowderPuff game and dance. For the dance there was anxiety over what to wear, finding a date, and where and what to eat. On Saturday the games began, Upperclassmen vs. Frosh-can we say LOSERS? The SHC tradition of upperclassmen winning no matter what was repeated. Various parties were also a big part of social life. The Sigma Chi's held their annual Booz Bash, the Lamda Chi's gave a toga party, and the Tau's held a Hurricane party. One favorite campus event is Fall Break. During Fall Break students go home for a couple days, or take roadtrips with their friends. A large group of Spring Hill students went to Dallas, and another group went on a camping trip.

Each year students also pick out certain hangouts, whether it be Mirror Lake, The Sundowner Lounge, O'Charley's, or the fraternity houses at University of South Alabama. Mainly students relaxed in their room or visited other students in other dorms. Another aspect of campus social life was Panhellenic and InterFraternity Rush. This year Panhellenic held its first fall rush. Freshman girls went through rush the third week of classes. Overall spring rush is preferred by the sororities, but over 50 girls pledged a sorority and made new friends. Annually mens rush is held after christmas break. IFC rush was almost two weeks long and when it was through over 50 guys pledged, also. Students at Spring Hill do not have the advantages in social life in comparison to other larger schools, but students still manage to have a good time with their friends.

Political Life

In an election year students tend to become more aware of the political life going on around them. In October, Marilyn Quayle came to Spring Hill and spoke briefly about the Republican campaign and the upcoming election. Students were very excited about Mrs. Quayle coming to speak, and many clubs on campus greeted her. The Young Republicans Club held a rally at the Mobile Airport and the first time Young Democrats Club participated in the preparations. Liz Goodwin, junior representative of SGA and member of the Young Republicans was very involved in Marilyn Quayle's visit. "It was very exciting to have a major political visitor like Mrs. Quayle on Campus," said Liz.

Throughout the campus students anticipated Marilyn Quayle's visit. Days before, secret service agents had been on campus to check out SHC's security and start some of their own. During the day of Mrs. Quayle's visit the Spring Hill campus was closed to outside visitors. Senior Marlo Peitrak commented, "I really thought Mrs. Quayle was well-spoken and tried to answer our questions." After Mrs. Quayle spoke students were allowed to ask questions. Various TV stations covered the speech and a few Spring Hill students were on TV.

Marilyn Quayle's visit marked an interesting moment in many students' eyes, and although President Bush lost the election, Spring Hill was proud to have Mrs. Quayle take the time to come and speak to SHC.

SHC Oktoberfest

Spring Hill's annual Oktoberfest started off with a bang. A variety of students participated in the games on Saturday. Mellie Boagni and Wes Cable were a few judges. Some of the games included the keg toss, the can throw, the egg toss, a relay race, an obstacle course, a pumpkin carving contest and last but not least tug-of-war through a huge mudpit. While P.J. Thelen's team and Andrew Forsdick's team tied as the official winners, everyone had fun. Even though the games were a little unorganized any person that participated in SHC Oktoberfest games had a few laughs.

The main event of Oktoberfest was Saturday night when the long-awaited Connells performed. Students listened from their dorm rooms, the student plaza, the cloister, and the tennis courts where the band was set-up. Even though it seemed as if The Connells only played for a half hour, most students agreed the group sounded great.

Oktoberfest traditionally starts the Thursday or Friday after students return from fall break. "I really like coming back to school with only three days of class left in the week and a Oktoberfest to look forward to in the upcoming weekend," said sophomore Theresa Holm. As this year's Oktoberfest celebration came to an end most students agree they cannot wait to see what SGA has planned for them next year.

CLASS ORATOR, SCOTT IMORDE

st Reverend Archbishop Lipscomb,
verend Father President,
assmates,
culty,
ends,
d Parents,

an vividly recall the first time I saw these great oaks on this ungettable Avenue. It was Alumni Weekend and I was fifteen years old, living with my father, a 1961 Spring Hill College graduate. As we passed beneath the protective arms of these majestic trees, I can remember my father speaking of fond memories, past teachers and old friends. And again, he referred to these recollections as part of "The Spring Hill Experience." I heard the words he spoke, but I did not fully understand their meaning.

What is this Spring Hill Experience?"

Today, I stand before you- my fellow classmates and friends of Spring Hill College, on this same Avenue, sheltered by the same Oak Trees which caught my eye and my curiosity some seven years ago. The difference is that, today, I have had the fortunate opportunity of receiving and, more importantly, completing my own "Spring Hill Experience." Today, we gather here to honor and celebrate not only being graduates of Spring Hill College, but graduating with the "Spring Hill Experience" as well. I know our "Spring Hill Experience" continues on after today. It is a lifelong air of reminiscing, coming back for Alumni weekends (and even giving money I suspect I should say).

The last couple of weeks has definitely been some of the most hectic and busy weeks at Spring Hill. Senior Seminars, class presentations and final exams coupled with interviews and graduate school applications have taken most of our time and thoughts. Just when I thought my last paper was turned in, and my last class skipped, I received yet another assignment: the opportunity and honor of delivering the valedictory address "for" the graduating class of 1993. I say the word "for" and not "because" I feel I am simply a mouthpiece for the feelings, reflections and pride that we, the graduates, are experiencing at this special and important juncture in our young lives.

The first thought which ran through my mind upon learning of my selection and task as the Senior Class Orator was... "Why me?" I knew that I was not the most intellectual student in the classroom. I also recognized that I was not the most popular person or "stud" on campus, the most gifted athlete on the playing fields. Yet, as I pondered further, I realized I was an outgrowth of these three features of Spring Hill. It dawned on me that what makes this institution so special, so distinctive is that one can succeed and grow intellectually, socially, athletically, and spiritually all at the same time. Spring Hill is conducive to developing a complete person- not just a rocket scientist or a jock. I realized this is what makes Spring Hill so unique, this is what characterizes the time-honored "Spring Hill Experience" I had heard so much about.

I go back to my original question. "What is this Spring Hill Experience?" What makes it so memorable and satisfying? From the first day in August, 1989, we were told at orientation to get ready to take part in the "Spring Hill Experience." But, even then we were unsure of ourselves, we were eighteen years old and just happy to be away from the rigging of our parents. We were free. There were no curfews to abide by, rooms we "had" to clean. We were simply ready for the ride of a lifetime. Hopefully everyone graduating here received that ride, and a fantastic education as well! For, I learned as much outside Quinlan Hall as I did inside it. Hopefully every one graduating here today can appreciate the inherent goodness at Spring Hill, the things Spring Hill has done right instead of wrong. Although the "Spring Hill Experience" will be different for each and every one of us, there are certain characteristics that make it unique. I would like to point out these traits today, and at the same time allow my classmates to take a short but meaningful trip down memory lane, or "memory avenue" as the case may be.

Over four years, so much has happened, I do not know exactly how to begin to define the "Spring Hill Experience." To help me in my task, in the past week, I have asked several of my peers and friends, which at Spring Hill are usually one and the same. I asked one simple question. "What do you remember most about Spring Hill?" Many of them simply took a step back, a blank look covering their faces, and responded, "you know, that is a great question." I do not think we will look back on our college years and remember just one incident, one teacher or even one person. The "Spring Hill Experience" has filled us with many great memories, much knowledge and occasionally one too many beers at such places as establishments as "the Hole" or "the Downer."

The word that seems to characterize many of the answers I heard was "tradition." There are certain things at Spring Hill which continue to live on despite the winds of change that the passage of time brings about. It seems there will always be Security giving out tickets, Marriott steak night, campus Mardi Gras, late night excursions through the tunnels, charging Christmas presents in the bookstore, false fire alarms or an occasional round of night golf. There will always be waiting till the last night to write your term paper or getting lost in the stacks in the library. Traditions like these are numerous and help define and describe the "Spring Hill Experience."

Another word which describes Spring Hill is family. It seems that there will always be Kathy in the bookstore, Leola in the mail room, Reggie in the Cloister, Henry in the hallways, and Chief in the garbage cans at three in the morning. I'm still not exactly sure what he is looking for. The "Spring Hill Experience" allows students to get to know their professors, have lunch with them in the cafeteria or even play nine holes of golf with them after class. Our teachers know our names, our idiosyncrasies and even our handwriting in some cases. Our professors are more than simply employed by the college. They are part of the Spring Hill family challenged with the task of educating our young minds. A task which they embrace with great enthusiasm and creativity. This almost parental relationship creates an ideal atmosphere for learning, and has prepared us for the "real" world which we now face. And for that, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the faculty on behalf of the Class of '93. Spring Hill truly does have a family atmosphere- a place where everyone can find their own niche and make an impact if they so choose. There is no other school where over eighty percent of the students study together, eat together, and party together, though not necessarily in that order. Spring Hill is small and this is good. Spring Hill is family, and now some 220 Seniors are saying goodbye to friends and faculty — to the Spring Hill family they have grown so close to.

For several years now, most of us have enjoyed these traditions and our Spring Hill family. Yet, we have done so without becoming stagnant. Each year Spring Hill and its students go through a process of growth and change, a process of living and learning, of laughing and crying, of experiencing all that we can in our short time here. As freshman, we could take off to the beach or New Orleans late at night and come back just in time for our 8:20 class. Four years later we find ourselves thinking twice about such roadtrips. We still may go, but at least we think twice.

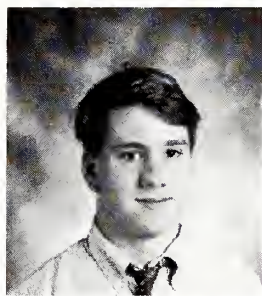

The college itself is a dynamic institution which embraces progress and change necessary conditions for success. We have the newly renovated Yenni Hall, which has breathed new life into the business department and the business curricula. The Student Government Association is working for the students and with the students by taking a larger role in improving Spring Hill community. Our basketball team has won districts two years in a row. I will never forget students, faculty, and administration coming together to watch the Badgers play on television in the NAIA National Tournament. The sight of Dean Cable and Dr. Johnson arguing with the referees on the screen is quite a sight I assure you. Along with the baseball team's recent successes there are even plans for a Spring Hill Recreation center. These are but a few of the achievements that have taken place in our four years. Needless to say, the future looks bright for Spring Hill College.

There, I finally said the word which is on everyone's mind lately, the "future." Now that we have graduated, what are we to do with our lives? What does the future hold for the class of '93? Well, I think the future looks bright for the Spring Hill graduates. I feel Spring Hill has put us on the right path towards success. Fellow graduates, we have been blessed in so many ways. With support from our parents, good health and strong, ambitious minds, we were able to receive a college degree in hopes of attaining the good life. But, more importantly, we now have the opportunity to make a positive impact on the world around us. We now have the tools to help fix the world and all its problems. We have the chance to attack the suffering and discrimination which is evident in our cities, states and countries. We have the ability, as Spring Hill graduates, to bring more good into the world and eliminate some of the bad. It is our duty, as our Jesuit education has taught us, to conduct our lives in such a way. At Spring Hill we were taught to question and to think; to formulate our own ideas and defend them. Our Spring Hill Experience is not yet over. As we embark on our future endeavors, whether it be our careers or our families, remember the ideals and the knowledge that the "Spring Hill Experience" has provided. I can think of no better goal to set today, on this Avenue of the Oaks, the symbol of our accomplishments and farewell, than to use our "Spring Hill Experience" to become the most complete, contributing and helpful person that we can be. Good Luck to you all, may God bless you and happy Mothers' Day.

As the year came to a close, students were happy exams had ended, but sad to leave their friends and SHC. Seniors anticipated graduation and the famous, "Avenue of the Oaks," all night party. Things had changed throughout the year. Basketball coach, Carl Nash, announced this would be his last year at, "the Hill," because of a job offer at Clemson University. Also, plans for a new recreational facility for the school were underway. In addition, the administration decided that in fall 1993 girls soccer would be a varsity sport. Spring Hill College is always changing to meet the needs of its students.
